BETWEEN THE FENCES

adapted from The Book of Our Heritage
by Eliyahu Kitov

The twenty-one days between the seventeenth of Tamuz and the ninth of Av are called שבעה עשר, the days between the fences. As it is written, "All her pursuers caught her between the fences." (Eicha:1). Upon which the sages say: These are the days of affliction (a play on words - metzarim, tzara) between the seventeenth of Tamuz and the ninth of Av. On these days many afflictions and calamities befell Israel through the generations. The first and second Temples were both destroyed during this period.

Rejoicing is diminished during these days more than any other time during the year. Marriages are not held from the seventeenth of Tamuz until after Tisha B'Av. We refrain from hair cutting (though the Sephardim permit it until the week Tisha B'Av falls). It is also customary not to recite the brachah Shehecheyanu on a new garment or a new fruit.

During these days, a person should avoid situations of danger, more than at other times during the year. And it is a good idea to set aside a time, each of these twenty-one days, for reflection and mourning over the destruction of both Temples.

SOME THOUGHTS ON PINCHAS

This week's Parsha introduces to the Jewish people a new radical type of hero-the fanatic. Pinchas, the staunch defender of G-D's name, quells a revolt by brutally murdering the two instigators--one of whom being a respected tribal leader.

To reward the action, G-D strangely enough confers upon Pinchas: a) the priesthood b) the covenant of Peace- Shalom.

At first glance, it would seem strange that the reward for violence should be peace. Are not the two ideas essentially incompatible?

A closer look at the passuk will indicate that the spelling of the word "pide-Shalom" contains a shortened letter Vav.

CHAIM NACHMAN BIALIK, 1873-1934

by Naomi Teitelbaum

This Monday, the twenty-first of Tamuz, is the Yahrzeit of Chaim Nachman Bialik, the greatest Hebrew poet of modern times. Bialik's environment greatly influenced all of his writings. His stories are filled with the fervor of folk spirituality and the beautiful countryside in which he lived.

Bialik was a diligent student, who despite the expanding modernization of Jewish life, continued to occupy himself with learning. Passionate and solitary dedication to learning shaped traits of character that Bialik was to exalt: "A fertile mind, lively logic, a trusting heart when the knee falters."

The influence of the Enlightenment caused many Jews to stray and be absorbed by the secular world. Bialik was soon to fall into the trap and he loses his purity as he leaves the security of his childhood and vainly attempts to recapture it. However, Bialik did not fight against Judaism and its traditions. Quite the contrary; he longed to be once again accepted into the Jewish world and in his poems, we can hear the grief and anguish that has betaken him. In one poem, he reminisces about the times when he was sitting in the Bet Midrash. There he felt secure beside his Gemarah, there he felt brotherhood and a peaceful tranquil atmosphere.

Although emerged in a secular world, Bialik relived his Judaism in his poems. He continuously strove to reconstruct a way of life in which he could survive as a Jew and thus fulfill Judaism's historic mission. Even when he wrote poems revolving around the beauties of nature, he still felt the presence of G-d.

Bialik had a superb command of the Hebrew language. He had the ability to incorporate idioms from the Torah into many of his works. Bialik's poems were read not only by his contemporaries but for generations after. When reading his poems, one can feel his anguish and pain, and sense the hardships which he was confronted with in his day. Bialik left his poems with us to teach us a lesson, to show us how to deal with humanity, as such.

SPECIAL REPORT FROM The Greater New York
Conference on Soviet Jewry.

As the following memorandum explains, the Soviet government will be severely limiting the size and value of parcels which may be sent into the Soviet Union as of June 15th. In taxing American charity, the Soviets are acting against the principles of closer economic and personal ties that are envisaged in the Helsinki Final Act.

In accordance with the recommendations made by the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, the Departments of State and of the Treasury should be asked to intervene with the Soviet government, since more U.S. dollars, representing needed hard currency by the Soviet Union, will now be exacted from U.S. citizens sending goods to families and friends in the USSR.

In addition, we urge you to contact your congressman and Soviet officials with the urgent demand that the new duties be rescinded.

Packages are vital to Soviet Jews who have been dismissed from their jobs because of their applications to emigrate to Israel. Since many of the "refuseniks" are forced to remain without any income for years, these parcels are a lifeline for them.

The new regulations will raise the assessed value of some items sent into the Soviet Union by eight or ten times their normal value. This will have the effect of raising the import duty, already at 70% of assessed value, in proportion to the newly assessed amount.

In addition, limits will be placed on the quantity and types of goods which may be sent; until now there has been no restriction on how many items a package could contain.

For example, under the current regulations, there is no limit to the number of women's skirts or blue jeans which may be included in a parcel. Under the new restrictions, a parcel could include only two skirts or two pairs of jeans. The inclusion of either skirts or jeans would make it impossible to send any jackets, knitted blouses, sweaters or vests in the same parcel. The duty on jeans would be increased almost 1000%: from 1.18 rubles the pair to 10.00 rubles the pair. Men's clothing would be similarly affected.

Five mohair scarves at a duty of 2.25 rubles each could be sent in one parcel, according to the old duty list. The new regulations limit the number of mohair scarves per parcel to two. The duty is also raised to 10.00 rubles for each scarf.

There was no limit on the number of blankets per parcel under the old rules. Now only one blanket is allowed per parcel. Cotton blankets were assessed at 1.35 rubles each and all other blankets, regardless of fabric or quality, will be assessed at 10.00 rubles each.

Furthermore, a shipload of between seven and eight thousand packages was detained in the USSR in September 1975 and stored in a Moscow warehouse. Each package is now being systematically inspected and the new restrictions are being placed on the September packages retroactively. It seems, that the October-May packages were not detained.

The results of these regulations will be to raise the cost of sending one $250. package to $600., which will have to be sent in three installments.

THE KIDNAPPING THAT WASN'T

Detective Howell knew it was not going to be one of his better days when Ivan Polansky came into his office. Ivan often came to the detective division of the Lakehurst Police Department.

Ivan usually said that he had witnessed a murder or a robbery. Detective Howell usually proved that Ivan was lying. Ivan was drunk half of the time, and he thought up these crimes, mostly for attention. Sometimes Ivan even believed his own stories. "What shall it be this time, Ivan?" asked Detective Howell.

"My sister was kidnapped," answered Ivan.

"When was this?" asked Howell.

"About a half hour ago."

Howell replied, "I didn't know you had a sister."

"Oh yes, we were separated many years ago in Poland and we were reunited six years ago during her engagement to an Englishman."

"Was her husband with her?"

"No, he's away on business."

"Was there any other motive for the kidnapping, other than the possibility of a ransom?" asked Howell.

"Yes, she was a member of the Polish Union Membership Association. I think she may have been kidnapped because of this."

"What happened, and where was this?" asked Howell.

Ivan answered, "She had just left after paying me a visit when I noticed a purse in the den. It could have been hers or the cleaning lady who came in the morning. I looked at the driving license and it said, 'Anne Polansky.' I ran out of the house to return it to my sister, but she had already driven off. I got in my car and followed her. Near the highway she was flagged down by a man in a light blue pontiac. I couldn't see the man's face but he grabbed her, knocked her over the head with something, put her in his car and drove off. I was very scared and afraid to do something, so I stayed in the distance."

"Ivan," asked Howell, "Why do you dream up these things?"

"What?" asked Ivan.

"Well, you lied. You gave yourself away when you said _____."

REPORT FROM ALUFIM - ALUFOT

KIBBUTZ GALUYOT

by Hannah Gold

On Sunday, July 11th, the Kibbutz Galuyot for the Alufim - Alufot took place. The theme this year was or the bicentennial and the part the Jews played in our country's history. The four teams were:

אנח - One Nation

אנח - Under G-d

אנח - Indivisible

אנח - With Liberty And Justice For All.

Each team stressed a different point in their skit, song decorations and banner. On the night of presentation, several spectators commented that it was superlative and the best they've seen in years.

The best part of this year's and every year's Kibbutz Galuyot is definitely the camper participation. There is rarely a camper who hasn't donated a full day's work to make their team a success. The counselors are definitely indispensable, and the two captains of every team are mandatory to an impressive team, but we mustn't forget, each and every member of the team himself is absolutely necessary if you want success.

Although this year every team deserved to win, there was one team who topped them all, and, if I say so myself, did a fantastic job. Mazel Tov, Team _____, for your victory in this year's Kibbutz Galuyot.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S MYSTERY STORY:
MURDER AT AURERY DRIVE

The murderer was Miss Veronica Sinclair. She said she checked the drinks and added more whiskey to the drinks in the blender. If the power was out, the blender couldn't have worked, so Miss Sinclair was obviously lying!

Steve Riesbaum, Head Waiter, offered an interesting comment on last week's "Who Did It?" (The butler - no mail on Sunday). He said the answer was clear when the butler said that he was delivering the mail - DE-LIVERING THE MAIL! Obviously, that's the way he committed the murder!

THE GOLDEN COINS - PART II
by Amri Josef Berger, B-1

Summary of plot until now: Dahvid, a poor peasant, found money which fell off a mail carriage. Undecided as to whether or not to return it, he began to spend some of it. His wife, not knowing of his find, became suspicious.

Dahvid realized by now that his secret had been revealed. He said, "Do you remember the money that was lost in the mail? I found it!"

"Why didn't you return it?" his wife asked.

"I was afraid of being arrested."

His wife asked, "What are you going to do now?"

Dahvid suggested that they hide the money in the yard, and they did. Later that day there was a knock at the door. "Who is it?" called out Dahvid's wife.

"Police. Open up!" Opening the door, she saw two policemen. They entered and said, "We have reason to believe that your husband stole the money lost in the mail. We have orders to arrest him and search the house."

The policemen took poor Dahvid away, but left without locating the money. Dahvid's wife was left in tears, trying to think of a solution. She thought, "If I give up the money, Dahvid will be convicted of stealing and put in jail. If I don't give it in, he may still be kept in jail."

Finally she decided to give the money to someone else. Although she realized it would frame another person, she got the envelope of money and went down to the main street of the village. She saw and heard men learning in the Baal Shem Tov's house. Panicking, she threw the money through the open window and ran away.

The envelope remained undetected as the men sat and learned. After the class, the Baal Shem Tov found the envelope lying on the floor. He quickly recognized it because the police had accused the Jews of stealing the money all along. The Baal Shem Tov sat and meditated to find an answer to his problem. Suddenly, there was a knock at the door. Who could it be ?!

IDENTITY
by Chumy Scharf, G-18

He was Jewish, but only to his heritage.
He was blind.
His eyes would not see the injustices done to his people -
Of their pain and persecution.
He was deaf.
His ears would not listen to the sorrowful and pleading voices of his people.
He heard nothing of their cries for help.
He was mute.
His mouth would not speak.
He would not speak truth, of justice he said nothing.
He remained silent to the world.
Then slowly he became aware of his identity
His eyes opened.
His ears heard all.
His voice was raised.
He had returned to his people
And to G-d.

WIN A WATERMELON!
A NEW INTER-BUNK CONTEST!!!

ALFABITS

HOW TO SOLVE ALFABITS: The idea is to try to form as many small words as you can out of the letters of a given word. You must follow the following rules:

1. Words must have roots of four letters or more. Words such as cats and goes are not allowed, since their roots, cat and go, do not have four letters

2. Only one form of a word may be used - either bottle or bottles, worth or worthy

3. All words will be checked in Webster's New World Dictionary, Second College Edition.

4. NO BUNK MAY WIN WATERMELON IN THE INTER-BUNK CONTEST MORE THAN TWO WEEKS IN A ROW (Sorry, B-13, but you'll have to wait until next week to try again.)

5. The word to use is:

DUNGAREES ←

NATURE

LTP TRIP by Lisa Freudenberger

The Editors of Shalhevet dedicate the following article to Debbie and Paula:

SKUNK STINKEROO SCORES SMASH AT SHTILI SHOW

Now, Seriously Speaking,

* S K U N K S * by Martin Feder

Since many skunks have been seen in and around CAMP MORASHA and due to an unfortunate incident, the nature staff decided to postpone the article on camping until next week and deal with first things first.

Skunks normally eat rodents and insects but are attracted to civilization by garbage and food left lying around. A SKUNK WILL NOT BOTHER YOU UNLESS YOU BOTHER IT FIRST. IT ONLY WANTS TO EAT THE STUFF YOU LEFT OUT.

Skunks are known for the terrible smell that results when they spray a stream of fluid from glands behind the tail. They spray, however, only if annoyed or threatened, and the spray reaches 15 feet (4.6 meters). If you should see a skunk, (which looks like a black cat with a long tail - some of them have a white stripe down the middle of the back), go about your business and it will probably go about its own. Don't scream or start running because that can only scare it and it might spray. When a skunk fires, he picks up his tail and faces backward to spray at his enemy. As long as the skunk is facing you and the tail is down, there is nothing to fear, if you remain calm and don't panic.

Skunks are terrestrial (land) and nocturnal (night) animals; they usually live in a small cave or hollow log. Inside is a bed of grass and leaves, where six to eight little skunks are born each spring.

What happens if, in spite of all precautions, a person is sprayed? Skunk 'juice' or spray contains a chemical called butyl mercaptan, which is the same thing that chemists put in odorless natural gas so people can smell gas leaks. When Vitamin C touches the spray, the butyl mercaptan quickly oxidizes. So the treatment is tomato paste, which has plenty of Vitamin C, and flour to draw out some of the spray that may have gotten Tuesday, July 13th, the LTP went on their first trip of the summer. We left camp grounds around 11:45 and arrived at our first destination, Liberty Bowling Lanes, where we had lunch and bowled. Afterwards, the busses were ready to take us to Sullivan's for shopping. Next door was a supermarket where we all stocked up on the essentials that are missing from our diets - iced tea, pickles, chocolate, etc.

We then went to Monticello where we saw "All the President's Men," with Robert Redford and Dustin Hoffman. They played the two Washington Post reporters who uncovered Watergate. It was an exceptionally good movie.

We were taken to Woodbourne for dinner. We had a choice of pizza and falafel or deli, and ended off the day with ice cream (parve or milchigl). All in all, it was a very good trip, and we are looking forward to the next one.

We celebrated Shulamit Motechin's birthday in day camp last week. We had all kinds of goodies and made beautiful birthday cards. The children expressed their feelings for Shulamit in the following ways:

MIRIAM COHEN: I made a rainbow design and wrote Shulamit a letter.

TOVA COHEN: I made a flower birthday card.

RIVKA COHEN: A rainbow and all different colored flowers.

HADASSAH STROLE: A tree and a garden of roses, and I made number 6.

CHUMI BESSER: I made a design, and a chocolate cake.

DONNY BESSER: A pretty scribble scrabble.

REUVEN SIFF: I made a necklace and earrings, and a tunnel design.

PENINA SIFF: I wrote letters and wrote my name.

MICHAEL INTRATOR: I made an ice cream birthday cake.

LISA MAIRHAFTIG: A pretty design - it looks like a clock.

HIJACKING by Carole Feder

Though international reactions to the Israeli rescue mission at the Entebbe airport in Uganda are still growing, the focus of attention still lies on the brilliance of the act itself rather than in its aftermath. This is what happened:

THE HIJACKING: Four guerillas took over an Air France aircraft en route from Tel Aviv to Paris with 244 passengers and 12 crew members on Sunday, June 27th. The terrorists identifying themselves as members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine took command immediately after the stopover in Athens. The hijacked plane stopped briefly in Libya to refuel and drop off an ill pregnant woman and then headed straight for Uganda where they were joined by five or six other guerillas armed with machine guns.

On Tuesday, the hijackers threatened to kill the hostages unless 53 Palestinian terrorists were released from prisons in Israel and several European nations.

Two days later Israel shocked everyone by agreeing to negotiate. However, after freeing 148 hostages from other nations as a show of good faith, the guerillas added a demand of five million dollars and extended the deadline to Sunday. This caused Israel to lose faith in negotiations and request government permission to execute the surprise rescue. Approval came Saturday morning. After a field hospital was set up in Kenya Israeli military tacticians began planning the mission itself.

THE RESCUE: On Saturday night 3 Israeli Hercules transports carrying the attack forces landed unchallenged in Uganda. They immediately sprayed the airfield with fire overpowering 60 to 100 Uganda troops and seven of the guerillas. Ten Ugandas MIG jet fighter planes were blown up as they herded the 103 confused Israelis to one of their rescue vehicles. After stopping briefly in Kenya to treat the wounded they returned to Israel victoriously.

THE RESULT: Three hostages and one Israeli officer were killed as were 20 Ugandans soldiers and seven terrorists.

continuation of SOME THOUGHTS ON PINHAS

Instead of spelling פיה, it is פיה. This new word, meaning complete, shows us that Pinhas, though he acted brutally, nonetheless was responsible for restoring a divine order in Klal Yisroel. For that Hashem bestows the reward of פיה - פיה Peace and Harmony.

Morasha Sports

MORASHA SOUNDLY DEFEATS SENECA LAKE 66-54

In the opening staff game of the summer, the Morasha staff team whipped visiting Seneca Lake 66-54. Both teams traded baskets in the early going as the game developed into a close, hand-fought struggle.

Despite some fine shooting by both Shloimie Leichtung and newcomer Avi Shaft Haar, Morasha only led by 4 points at halftime. Most of Seneca's scoring came from Maccabiah star Aaron Grandison and Abbi Gewirtz. However, the real star of the game was Shaft Haar, who is well known to all of us, despite the fact that it is only his first season here at Morasha.

As the second half opened, the tempo of the game picked up as it became clear that the team which could control the boards and choose the shots well would come out on top. Paul & Mitch Merlis began to muscle their way underneath the basket, leading to many key baskets and rebounds inside. The continued fine play of the backcourt duo, Leichtung and Haar, helped Morasha widen the gap. Zev Carey, Lenny Schwartzbaum, Artie Grossbard, and Sheldon Eskowitz all contributed to a 12 point lead which Seneca found insurmountable.

Morasha's defense tightened up, and Bader, Grandison, and Gewirtz found themselves bottled up on almost every attempt at a basket. Avi Haar, who provided court leadership throughout the whole game, dribbled through Seneca's desperate press and the visitors saw any hope for an upset drift away.

The home-town favorites, despite winning their first game, are looking forward to steady improvement. High scorers for Morasha were Shaft Haar with 16, Paul Merlis with a strong 15, Shloimie Leichtung with 12, and an injured Mitch Merlis chipped in with 10 points.

Seneca's leading scorers were Aaron Grandison and Abbi Gewirtz, each with 16 points. The next staff game is Wednesday night, July 21st, at Camp Oren. The Morasha Minutemen are hoping to bring back another solid victory.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS by Adelle as of 7/13/76 Greenfield

In tennis both Chris Evert and Bjorn Borg captured Wimbledon titles. Bjorn Borg, 20 years of age, defeated Ilie Nastase by a shocking 6-4 6-2 9-7.

In women's tennis Evert defeated Goolagong 6-3 4-6 8-6.

Between them last week's winners have won 7 French and Italian championships. Chris has 3 Slams titles, a couple of Wightman cup team victories, 2 Wimbledon and her US open championship. Bjorn won the Davis cup, Wct championship and now Wimbledon too.

For all you NY fans: the Yankees are 9½ games into first place. However the Mets are still lagging behind in 3rd place of the National League.

There will be greater coverage of sports in next week's issue when Olympics take place.
